

Information & Product Recommendation Bulletin - Coronavirus (COVID-19)

What is it?

Coronaviruses are a family of viruses known to cause a range of illnesses from the common cold to the SARS-CoV outbreak in 2003. COVID-19 is a new strain of coronavirus, originating in Wuhan, China, that had not previously been detected in humans.

How is it transmitted?

Coronaviruses are mainly transmitted by large respiratory droplets and direct or indirect contact with infected secretions. They have also been detected in blood, faeces and urine and, under certain circumstances, airborne transmission is thought to have occurred for aerosolised respiratory secretions and faecal material.

Personal protective equipment (PPE) and good infection prevention and control precautions are effective at minimising risk but can never eliminate it. Appropriate cleaning and disinfecting of the environment is essential in preventing the spread of the virus.

How can I keep surfaces clean?

As coronaviruses have a lipid envelope, a wide range of disinfectants are effective. It is not yet confirmed how long the SARS-CoV-2 lasts on surfaces, but some coronaviruses can linger for up to 9 days.

The Centre for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends taking preventative action that includes regularly cleaning and disinfecting frequently touched objects and surfaces. Surfaces that are frequently touched include door handles, desks, TV remotes and computer keyboards. By the nature of these items, it's easy to see how infections can spread, as they are likely to be touched by multiple people each day.

Cleaning with a neutral detergent is ESSENTIAL before any form of disinfecting takes place and therefore, we recommend introducing a two-stage cleaning process. The first stage includes using a general-purpose detergent (e.g. washing up liquid) to remove dirt and soil etc. The second stage is the application of the disinfectant, options of those effective against the COVID-19 are overleaf. All need a 5-minute dwell time in order to eliminate.
